

AFRICAN AMERICAN WOMEN: ITS TIME TO DISCOVER THE JEWELS IN OUR GENES

Veronica Meadows-Ray

I was diagnosed with breast cancer in March of 2007 at the age of 48. I share a breast cancer diagnosis with my mother and my aunt. We don't carry the BRCA mutations and are interested in helping to recruit African American women and their relatives for a study to find new breast cancer genes that we might share. This new study is the first step to helping us find the answers.

Veronica with her Mother, Mary, left and Aunt Evelyn, right. All breast cancer survivors

For more information, about the study, contact:

The Jewels in Our Genes Study

Heather Ochs-Balcom, PhD

167 Farber Hall

Buffalo, NY 14214

Phone: 716-829-5603